The school holds the "Biggest Loser" in his honor. But not this year. The Cleveland Cavaliers faced off against their biggest opponents last week: Dan Gilbert. The Cavs owner beat District 4 CSN's Dan Sherman in a pingpong match at Cleveland's Nathan Hale Elementary School. The school was holding the annual "Biggest Loser" contest in Gilbert's honor when the game was played. But not this year. Of course, Sherman was a big hit. For him, this was a "huge" opportunity to show off his pingpong skills. "I was just having a good time," said Sherman. The gym's owner, former NBA star Sherman, and the Cavs' Gilbert agreed that this event was going to be fun and family-oriented. "My mom told me, 'Here, go play Dan in a pingpong match'," said Sherman, "and I didn't want to take her advice." But since he was so close to his mom, Sherman went along with it. He won the game, 6-1. Meanwhile, Gilbert's family were nearby to witness the action. It was a fun, father-son moment that Gilbert said has become a tradition at the school. "My son played pingpong years ago with his classmates, and the second I saw him play this morning, I knew Dan was going to play," said Gilbert. Sherman said he was excited to show off his new skills at the local elementary school. "I thought it was time that I played a bigger school," said Sherman. "I 3da54e8ca3
